thank you Maciel

- From Maciel M Hernandez to Everyone: 03:27 PM

I agree - students had mixed responses to breakout groups in my class

- From Kimberly Nettles-Barcelon (she/her) to Everyone: 03:28 PM

Maciel ... Were the breakout groups students only or students and TA?

- From Maciel M Hernandez to Everyone: 03:30 PM

Breakout groups were only students. This is a 110 student class.

They need a task specific goal

- From Joshua Hori to Everyone: 03:31 PM

You can be in multiple break out rooms if you connect with all your devices. Laptop, mobile, tablet would allow you to join 3 different break out rooms in the same zoom session.

- From Darnel Degand to Everyone: 03:31 PM

This is strictly information about undergraduates, correct?

- From Kem Saichaie (he|him) to Everyone: 03:35 PM

- From Fawn Cothran to Everyone: 03:48 PM

oh different location but present – disregard

- From Lorena Oropeza to Everyone: 03:49 PM

What does turn to partner mean?

- From Benjamin David Weber to Everyone: 03:52 PM

I think we call them different things at different institutions? I use short clarification and question papers but never called them muddiest points. I used to use debate and now use story circle process instead

- From Lorena Oropeza to Everyone: 03:53 PM

Ben, what is story circle process? do you have a cite or link?

I'll look for a good link but it's a process used by Alternate ROOTS and other cultural organizers in the South developed by theatre folks like John O'Neal

During this zoom meeting, I'm realizing that my vision has deteriorated. It used to be great at computer distance.

At some point, disability activists point out, if we live long enough, we almost certainly experience a disability

- From Mariel Vazquez to Everyone: 04:27 PM

Joshua, can you talk to us about adaptive technology that can facilitate the move to online teaching for faculty. There is much more typing, browsing, creating online resources etc...

- From Kimberly Nettles-Barcelon (she/her) to Everyone: 04:30 PM
