

Enhancing Effective Mentorship: Discussion of Evidence-Based Mentoring Practices

Tuesday, January 23, 2018 | 9:00–10:30am
Student Community Center, Multi-Purpose Room

UC Davis Graduate Studies
Academic Affairs and Campus Diversity

Invite you to join us for a
Mentoring at Critical Transitions
(MCT)

Faculty Development Workshop on Enhancing Effective Mentorship
with Kelly Diggs-Andrews,
National Research Mentoring Network
(NRMN)

Attendees will be introduced to the evidence-based Entering Mentoring series and discuss the benefits of quality mentoring, identify its core elements, and describe approaches to improve mentoring practices. This workshop will focus on effective communication skills, aligning expectations, and addressing equity and inclusion. In addition, participants will learn about available resources and opportunities through the National Research Mentoring Network (NRMN).

REGISTRATION: Please register here.

Kelly Diggs-Andrews, Ph.D. is a Master Facilitator with the National Research Mentoring Network (NRMN) and has organized and co-facilitated Research Mentor Training workshops for graduate trainees, postdoctoral fellows, and junior and senior faculty. She is the founder and CEO of Diggs-Andrews Consulting, LLC, a consulting and media company whose goal is to broaden accessibility to science careers through science outreach, diversity training, and professional development.

This event COUNTS TOWARDS FACULTY ELIGIBILITY for the Mentoring at Critical Transitions Wakeham Fellowship administered by Graduate Studies which awards up to five $10,000 fellowships to faculty mentors to provide support for one or more of their graduate student mentees.

Coffee and Pastries will be served.