FACULTY WORKSHOPS

Wednesday, February 24
Making the Invisible Visible: Using Cognitive Apprenticeship to Engage Students in Disciplinary Discourse
1:00PM–2:00PM
 As disciplinary experts, academics read, write, and think about concepts in ways that are particular to our field of study. These discursive practices often become automatic and invisible to us, which can make teaching them to students a challenge. In this workshop for faculty, participants will be introduced to cognitive apprenticeship as a model for teaching disciplinary discourse and will come away with specific strategies to support students’ learning. Facilitated by Rachel Stumpf, PhD, Education Specialist - Center for Educational Effectiveness. RSVP HERE!

Friday, February 26
Formative Feedback to Engage Students in High-Enrollment Classes
12:10PM–1:30PM
 In this workshop, Dr. Rucha Joshi (Biomedical Engineering) shares the system she developed to provide formative feedback to students in online classes. Dr. Joshi will describe characterizations of feedback along multiple dimensions, such as dialogic iterative cycles, personalized, goal-directed, immediate, in written format, and having a peer assessment component. She will share results of her implementation of this system and give participants an opportunity to adapt the tools for their own classes. Facilitated by Dr. Rucha Joshi (BME), Assistant Professor of Teaching - Biomedical Engineering. RSVP HERE!
